Missouri .-- A correspondent of the short of death, as may be imposed by a court Memphis Appeal, with Gen. Price's army, writing on the 6th ult., says, in reference to the action of the Missouri Legislature at Neosho:

Both House continued to meet and adjourn for want of a quorum for nearly a Confederate States. week. There was a quorum present in the House on Saturday, the 26th ult., and the Senate having adjourned the day before to Monday, the 28th, on that day both Houses assembled, there being a quorum in each to do business, and went into secret session. In the evening, after some discussion, the ordinance adopting the Con. stitution of the Confederate States of America, and making Missouri a member thereof, was passed. It was not an ordinance of secession. The storm of revolution which had swept for months previous all over this fair State had broken every tie that bound her to the iniquitous Black Republican Government, the United States of America. In the evening it was announced to the camp and surrounding country by the firing of cannon, that sent their hoarse voices to the distance of fortyfive miles, echoing and re-echoing among the thousand hills and valleys of the Southheavens, and volleys of small arms accompanying the roar of the cannon fully testified to the joy with which they received the glad news.

OUR FRIENDS AND CUSTOMERS.

NECESSITY requires that we should make a change in the terms of selling goods, as we cannot now order a solitary article without Cach. This we have exhausted, as a firm and as individuals; collect, we cannot, borrow, out af the question. How can we supply our absolute wants of necessity? Our Drugs of ordinary consumption are nearly entirely disposed of, on credit; when out, how are yot to be supplied.

Small cash payments among to larger once

Small cash payments amount to larger ones, when contributed by every one and will enable us to keep a moderate and ordinary supply of necessary medicines on hand, without putting any one to much inconvenience. The above change we do not make, for speculation or to annoy our customers, but as a means, by which we will be enabled to continue such a smeans of actions of a state of a state of the s which we will be enabled to continue such a supply of articles as every day's use may require. A moderate payment on our bills of the past year, from every one, would enable us to continue ore business as usual and avoid the change. This last suggestion has proved impracticable. We hope that this explanation will be satisfactory to all parties. We desire to close our books, and hope our customers will call and give their notes for last year's bills.
